Understanding the Enlisted Army Class B Uniform: A Foundation of Professionalism

The U.S. Army Class B uniform, officially known as the Army Service Uniform (ASU), is a significant uniform in a Soldier's wardrobe, representing a formal and professional appearance. For enlisted personnel, correctly setting up this uniform is not merely about following a checklist; it's about embodying the discipline and standards of the United States Army. This uniform is typically worn for formal occasions, ceremonies, and daily duty in certain environments. Each element, from the color of the uniform to the precise placement of every piece of insignia, contributes to the overall image of the Soldier and, by extension, the Army. Understanding the intricacies of the enlisted Army Class B uniform setup guide is therefore paramount for any Soldier aspiring to maintain a high level of military bearing.

Key Components of the Enlisted Army Class B Uniform

The U.S. Army Class B uniform comprises several distinct components, each with specific requirements for wear and appearance. As an enlisted Soldier, familiarity with these elements is essential for proper uniform construction. This section will break down the primary pieces that constitute the enlisted Army Class B uniform setup.

The Army Service Uniform (ASU) Coat

The ASU coat, often the most recognized part of the Class B uniform, is a tailored jacket that signifies a Soldier's rank and service. It is typically dark blue or black, depending on the specific variant and historical context, though the modern ASU is a distinctive Army Green. The fit is crucial, with the coat designed to be neither too tight nor too loose, allowing for a neat and professional appearance. Proper tailoring ensures that the Soldier's posture is enhanced and that the uniform presents a sharp silhouette.

Trousers

The trousers worn with the ASU are designed to match the coat. They should be tailored to have a clean break over the shoes. The waistline should be at the natural waist, and the trousers should not sag or be excessively tight. The proper fit of the trousers is integral to the overall cohesive look of the Class B uniform.

Shirt

The ASU shirt is typically a white, long-sleeved button-down dress shirt. It features a convertible collar that can be worn open at the neck without a tie or closed with a black necktie. The shirt must be clean, pressed, and free of wrinkles. The cuffs should extend slightly beyond the sleeves of the ASU coat.

Headgear

Headgear is a critical component of the Class B uniform and varies based on rank and gender. For enlisted Soldiers, this can include the garrison cap, beret, or the Army Combat Uniform (ACU) patrol cap in certain contexts. The garrison cap, often associated with the ASU, must be worn squarely on the head, with the crown parallel to the ground and the front crease extending from the center of the right eye to the top of the ear. The beret is worn with the longest draping of the beret falling over the Soldier's left eye, with the edge of the beret 1 inch above the eyebrows and the elastic band of the beret to the right and drawn down snugly.

Footwear and Legwear

Black leather shoes, typically oxford or oxford-style dress shoes, are standard with the ASU. They must be highly shined and in good condition. For men, black socks are worn, and for women, black sheer hosiery or black socks may be worn, depending on the specific uniform variant and regulations. The trousers should have a neat break on the shoes.

Proper Assembly of the Enlisted Army Class B Uniform

Assembling the Class B uniform requires meticulous attention to detail, ensuring every component is correctly placed and presented. This section provides a step-by-step approach to ensure your enlisted Army Class B uniform setup is regulation-compliant and aesthetically pleasing. Following these guidelines will help you achieve the professional appearance expected of all U.S. Army Soldiers.

Preparation and Inspection

Before assembling your Class B uniform, thoroughly inspect each component for cleanliness, damage, and proper fit. Ensure the ASU coat and trousers are professionally pressed or steam-cleaned. The shirt should be wrinkle-free, and the shoes should be impeccably shined. Check all insignia for damage or wear.

Wearing the ASU Coat

The ASU coat is worn buttoned, with all buttons fastened. The collar should lie flat against the shirt collar. The bottom of the coat should be parallel to the ground. The sleeves should be properly tailored to the correct length, extending about 1/4 to 1/2 inch below the shirt cuff.

Wearing the Trousers and Shirt

Trousers should be worn with a proper belt, typically a black leather belt with a plain silver buckle. The shirt is tucked in neatly, creating a smooth line with the trousers. The necktie, if worn, should be centered and the tip of the tie should reach the top of the belt buckle. The collar of the shirt should be neatly pressed and the buttons fastened.

Footwear and Presentation

Ensure your shoes are polished to a high shine. The leg of the trousers should have a clean break over the shoe, meaning the fabric rests neatly on the top of the shoe without significant creasing or bunching. Socks or hosiery should be neatly pulled up.

Headgear for the Enlisted Army Class B Uniform

Headgear is an integral part of the Army Service Uniform (ASU), also known as the Class B uniform, and its proper wear is a hallmark of military presentation. For enlisted personnel, the specific headgear regulations depend on rank, gender, and the occasion. This section focuses on the correct enlisted Army Class B uniform setup for various headwear options.

The Garrison Cap (Side Cap)

The garrison cap is a common headgear for the ASU. It must be worn squarely on the head, with the crown parallel to the ground. The front crease of the cap should align with the center of the Soldier's right eye, extending to the top of the right ear. The chin strap should be secured, but not overly tight, resting just below the chin. The cap should be positioned so that the edge of the cap is approximately 1 inch above the eyebrows. The appropriate cap device, such as a unit or branch insignia, is worn on the front left side of the cap.

The Beret

The beret is another authorized headgear for the ASU, often worn by those in units that have adopted it as mandatory. The beret is worn with the longest portion of the crown falling over the Soldier's left eye. The edge of the beret should be positioned approximately 1 inch above the eyebrows, and the elasticated band should be drawn down snugly on the right side of the head. The chin strap is adjusted to rest just below the chin. The flash, typically a unit or branch insignia, is worn centered on the flap of the beret, directly above the left eye.

The Combination Cap (For Sergeants First Class and Above)

While primarily associated with officers and senior non-commissioned officers (NCOs), certain senior enlisted ranks may be authorized to wear the combination cap. This headgear has a brim and a crown, often adorned with insignia specific to rank and branch. The wear and placement of the combination cap are highly regulated, ensuring it sits squarely on the head and the brim is parallel to the ground. The wearer must ensure the cap device is correctly positioned on the front of the cap.

Shirts and Trousers: The Foundation of the Class B

The shirt and trousers form the basic structure of the U.S. Army's Class B uniform, and their proper fit and maintenance are fundamental to a polished appearance. As an enlisted Soldier, mastering the enlisted Army Class B uniform setup for these core components is essential. This section details the requirements for shirts and trousers in the ASU.

The ASU Shirt: Details of Wear

The standard ASU shirt is a long-sleeved, white dress shirt. It features a convertible collar, meaning it can be worn either closed with a necktie or open at the neck. When worn with the necktie, the collar points should be flat against the shirt. The shirt must be impeccably clean and pressed, with no visible wrinkles. The sleeves should extend approximately 1/4 to 1/2 inch below the coat sleeves, and the cuffs should be buttoned. The shirt must be tucked into the trousers smoothly, ensuring a neat appearance with no bunching or slack.

ASU Trousers: Fit and Finish

The trousers accompanying the ASU coat are designed to be worn with the same formal aesthetic. They should be tailored for a proper fit, sitting at the natural waist. The length of the trousers is critical; they should have a clean "break" over the shoes, meaning the fabric rests lightly on the top of the shoe without excessive creasing or bunching. The crease in the trousers, both front and back, should be sharp and well-defined. The trousers are worn with a black leather belt with a subdued silver buckle. The belt should be threaded through the belt loops, and the buckle should be centered.

Tailoring and Maintenance

Proper tailoring is key to achieving the regulation look for both the shirt and trousers. Seek out a professional tailor who is experienced with military uniforms. Regular maintenance, including proper washing and pressing, is vital to preserve the shape and appearance of these foundational pieces. Pay close attention to the pressing of the shirt collar and the sharp creases in the trousers.

Footwear and Legwear with the Class B Uniform

The correct footwear and legwear are crucial for completing the professional presentation of the U.S. Army Class B uniform. This section provides guidance on the enlisted Army Class B uniform setup for these often-overlooked, yet critical, elements. Proper attention to footwear and legwear significantly contributes to the overall polished appearance of the Soldier.

Footwear Requirements

Black leather, oxford-style dress shoes are the standard for the ASU. These shoes must be kept in pristine condition, with a high-gloss shine. Any scuffs or wear should be meticulously repaired or polished out. The shoes should be well-maintained and fit comfortably. The lacing of the shoes should be neat and consistent.

Legwear Options

For enlisted Soldiers wearing the Class B uniform, legwear regulations dictate specific choices. For men, black, mid-calf length dress socks are mandatory. These socks should be made of cotton, wool, or a blend, and they must be free of holes or visible damage. For women, black sheer hosiery (nylons) are generally prescribed, or black, mid-calf socks can be worn, depending on specific regulations and uniform context. The key is that the legwear should be discreet and complement the overall uniform.

Achieving the Correct "Break"

The "break" of the trousers over the shoes is a critical detail in the Class B uniform. The trousers should extend to the top of the shoe and rest on the laces without folding or bunching. This requires careful tailoring of the trouser length. A professional tailor can help ensure the correct break is achieved, contributing to a sharp and uniform appearance. The goal is a clean, unbroken line from the trouser hem to the top of the shoe.

Insignia and Accouterments: Personalizing Your Class B

The U.S. Army Class B uniform, or ASU, is more than just the clothing; it's the canvas upon which a Soldier's achievements and affiliations are displayed through insignia and accouterments. For enlisted personnel, the correct placement and selection of these items are dictated by strict regulations, ensuring a standardized and professional appearance. This section of the enlisted Army Class B uniform setup guide focuses on the critical details of insignia and accouterments.

Rank Insignia

Enlisted rank insignia, such as chevrons and rockers, are placed on the sleeves of the ASU coat. The specific placement varies slightly based on the rank and the type of coat. For instance, Specialist (E-4) through Sergeant Major (E-9) have their rank insignia positioned on the upper sleeves, typically centered on the insignia tab. The bottom of the chevrons usually aligns with the collar point when the arm is at the side. It is crucial to consult Army Regulation 670-1 for precise placement guidelines.

Name Tapes and Unit Patches

Name tapes, bearing the Soldier's last name in embroidered letters, are affixed to the hook-and-loop or sewn onto the uniform blouse, typically on the wearer's right breast. The unit patch, representing the Soldier's assigned unit, is worn on the wearer's left sleeve, usually centered above the rank insignia or on the opposing sleeve if rank is not present there. The unit patch's placement is also subject to specific regulations regarding its position relative to the shoulder seam.

Other Authorized Accouterments

The Class B uniform may also include other authorized accouterments such as aiguilletes, citation cords, and the Army Service Ribbon. These items are worn according to specific regulations, with precise placement often mandated to maintain uniformity. For example, citation cords are typically worn on the left breast pocket area. The U.S. Army tape, bearing the words "U.S. ARMY," is worn centered on the wearer's right pocket flap. All accouterments must be authorized and in good condition.

Placement of Rank, Name Tapes, and Unit Patches

The precise placement of rank insignia, name tapes, and unit patches on the U.S. Army Class B uniform is paramount for adherence to regulations and projecting a sharp, professional image. This guide to the enlisted Army Class B uniform setup emphasizes the importance of these details. Incorrect placement can detract from the overall appearance and indicate a lack of attention to detail.

Rank Insignia on the ASU Coat

For enlisted Soldiers, rank insignia are displayed on the sleeves of the ASU coat. The specific placement is standardized. For example, the bottom of the chevrons for Private (E-1) through Sergeant First Class (E-7) is typically positioned 1/2 inch below the collar when the arm is at the side. The center of the insignia should be on the outward side of the sleeve. Specialist (E-4) and Sergeant (E-5) wear their rank insignia on the collar. Sergeants First Class (E-7) and above wear their rank insignia on the sleeves. Always refer to the latest version of Army Regulation 670-1 for the most accurate placement instructions, as these can be updated.

Name Tapes: Identification and Placement

The name tape, bearing the Soldier's last name, is typically worn on the wearer's right breast pocket flap or centered on the chest, depending on the specific uniform variant and the presence of other insignia. The letters are usually embroidered in black on a tan or olive drab background. The tape should be straight and centered. The "U.S. ARMY" tape is worn on the wearer's left breast pocket flap or centered on the chest, opposite the name tape, unless other insignia or awards dictate otherwise.

Unit Patches: Affiliation and Positioning

The unit patch, also known as the shoulder sleeve insignia (SSI), is worn on the wearer's left sleeve. For the ASU, the unit patch is typically placed centered on the sleeve, with the top of the patch positioned 1/2 inch below the shoulder seam. Some specific unit patches may have unique placement instructions. It is essential for Soldiers to be aware of their unit's specific SSI and its authorized wear. The patch should be securely attached, either sewn or affixed with hook-and-loop fasteners, and should not be creased or damaged.

Awards, Decorations, and Badges on the Class B

A significant aspect of the U.S. Army Class B uniform, or ASU, is the display of awards, decorations, and badges, which signify a Soldier's achievements and qualifications. Properly placing these items on the enlisted Army Class B uniform setup is crucial for both recognition and adherence to regulation. This section will guide you through the general principles of wearing these distinctions.

Order of Precedence for Awards

Awards and decorations are worn in a specific order of precedence, starting with the most senior award on the wearer's right and progressing to the left. This order is dictated by Army Regulation 670-1. It includes U.S. military decorations, U.S. non-military decorations, U.S. unit awards, foreign military decorations, and foreign non-military decorations. Understanding this hierarchy is essential for correct placement.

Placement of Ribbons and Medals

Ribbons are typically worn in one or more rows on the left breast of the ASU coat. The rows are stacked vertically, with the top row closest to the lapel. Miniature medals are worn on the ASU coat when prescribed for formal occasions. They are also arranged in a specific order and are generally worn on the left breast, mirroring the placement of ribbons, but on a backing that allows them to hang correctly.

Wear of Badges

Badges, such as the Expert Marksmanship Badge, Combat Action Badge, or Airborne Badge, are worn on the ASU coat according to specific regulations. Most badges are worn on the left breast, either above or below the ribbon rack, depending on the type of badge and the presence of other awards. Some badges may be authorized for wear on the right breast. For example, the Driver and Mechanic Badge is often worn on the right breast. The size and backing of badges must also comply with regulations.

Qualification and Skill Badges

Qualification and skill badges, often referred to as "jump wings" or "sharpshooter badges," are typically worn in rows on the left breast of the ASU coat, above the ribbon rack. The order of precedence for badges is also critical, with certain badges taking priority in their placement. It is important to consult Army Regulation 670-1 for the exact placement and order of all badges, as well as for any specific exceptions or allowances for certain units or roles.

Grooming Standards for the Enlisted Army Class B Uniform

Beyond the attire itself, a Soldier's personal grooming is an integral part of the overall presentation when wearing the U.S. Army Class B uniform. The enlisted Army Class B uniform setup guide would be incomplete without addressing these critical standards. Proper grooming ensures a neat, professional, and disciplined appearance that reflects positively on the individual and the Army.

Hair Standards

Hair for all Soldiers must be clean, neat, and of a conservative style. For men, hair will be tapered and will not touch the ears or the back of the collar. Facial hair must be neatly trimmed or removed entirely. For women, hair will be tied back and secured neatly, and if worn down, it must not fall below the collar or obstruct the wearer's vision. Hair accessories must be of a color that blends with the hair. Wigs and hairpieces are permitted if they are neat, natural-looking, and of a conservative color and style that does not interfere with the wear of military headgear.

Personal Hygiene

Impeccable personal hygiene is a fundamental requirement. This includes regular bathing, use of deodorant, and maintaining clean fingernails and toenails. Perfumes and colognes should be used sparingly and should not be overpowering. The goal is to present a clean and fresh appearance.

Cosmetics and Jewelry

When wearing the Class B uniform, women may wear makeup that is conservative and blends with their skin tone. False eyelashes are permissible if they are natural-looking and do not detract from the uniform. Jewelry is limited. Men may wear a conservative wristwatch and wedding band. Women may wear a necklace, earrings, and rings, provided they are conservative and do not present a safety hazard or detract from the uniform. Earrings are typically small, conservative studs or small hoop earrings in gold, silver, or pearl.

Tattoo and Branding Policy

Soldiers must adhere to the Army's policies regarding tattoos and branding. Tattoos and brands that are visible while wearing the Class B uniform or that are offensive, vulgar, or promote discrimination are not permitted. Tattoos on the neck, face, and hands must be within the prescribed limitations.

Maintenance and Care of the Class B Uniform

To maintain the sharp, professional appearance required by the U.S. Army Class B uniform, proper maintenance and care are essential. This section of the enlisted Army Class B uniform setup guide focuses on keeping your ASU in top condition. Neglecting care can lead to a diminished appearance and potential non-compliance with regulations.

Cleaning the ASU Coat and Trousers

The ASU coat and trousers are typically made of wool or a wool blend. They should be dry-cleaned professionally to maintain their shape and color. If minor stains occur, spot-cleaning with a mild detergent and a damp cloth may be attempted, but it's best to consult a professional if unsure. Avoid washing these items in a washing machine or drying them in a machine, as this can cause shrinkage and damage the fabric. Always check the care label on the uniform for specific instructions.

Caring for the ASU Shirt

The white ASU shirt should be washed regularly to keep it clean and bright. Use a good quality laundry detergent and wash in warm or hot water, depending on the fabric. Bleach can be used for whitening if the fabric permits, but test it on an inconspicuous area first. The shirt should be ironed while slightly damp or using a steam iron to ensure a crisp finish. Pay close attention to the collar and cuffs to ensure they are perfectly pressed.

Polishing Footwear

The black leather oxford shoes worn with the Class B uniform must be kept highly polished. Use a good quality shoe polish that matches the color of the shoes. Apply the polish in thin, even coats, buffing between coats with a soft cloth or brush. A mirror shine can be achieved through a rigorous polishing process, often involving multiple layers of polish and water. Keep the shoes stored in a way that prevents dust and damage.

Storage of the Uniform

When not in use, the ASU should be stored properly to prevent wrinkles and damage. Hang the coat and trousers on sturdy hangers, preferably padded ones, to maintain their shape. Ensure the uniform is stored in a clean, dry environment, away from direct sunlight, which can cause fading. Consider using garment bags for added protection.

Frequently Asked Questions about the Enlisted Army Class B Uniform Setup

As you master the enlisted Army Class B uniform setup, you may encounter common questions. This section addresses some of the most frequent inquiries to ensure a comprehensive understanding of the ASU wear and maintenance.

What is the difference between Class A and Class B uniforms in the U.S. Army?

The U.S. Army primarily uses the Army Service Uniform (ASU), which can be worn in various configurations. The term "Class A" often refers to the ASU worn with the ASU coat, tie, and headgear. "Class B" typically refers to the ASU worn with the ASU coat, but with the collar open and no necktie, or in some older contexts, it might refer to a less formal version of the service uniform. However, the modern terminology emphasizes the ASU as the primary service uniform, with variations based on formality and accessories.

How often should the Class B uniform be dry-cleaned?

The frequency of dry cleaning depends on how often the uniform is worn and how soiled it becomes. For the ASU coat and trousers, it is generally recommended to dry-clean them after every few wears or when noticeable dirt or stains appear. Over-cleaning can also wear down the fabric, so it's a balance between maintaining cleanliness and preserving the garment.

Can I wear my Army Combat Uniform (ACU) patrol cap with the ASU?

Generally, the ACU patrol cap is not authorized for wear with the ASU. The authorized headgear for the ASU is typically the garrison cap, beret, or combination cap, depending on rank and specific regulations. Always refer to Army Regulation 670-1 for the most current headgear policies.

Where do I get my ASU tailored?

It is highly recommended to use a professional tailor who has experience with military uniforms. Many military installations have tailor shops on base that specialize in military attire. If off-post, look for a tailor with a good reputation for military uniform tailoring.

How do I ensure my rank insignia is placed correctly on the ASU coat?

Consult Army Regulation 670-1 for exact placement diagrams for enlisted rank insignia on the ASU coat. The regulations provide precise measurements for where each rank should be positioned on the sleeve or collar. If unsure, seek guidance from your unit's senior NCO or the garrison's S1/Adjutant General's office.

Conclusion: Maintaining Professionalism in the Class B

Mastering the nuances of the enlisted Army Class B uniform setup is a fundamental aspect of a Soldier's military bearing and adherence to U.S. Army standards. This comprehensive guide has outlined the critical components, from the ASU coat and trousers to the proper wear of headgear, insignia, and accouterments. Understanding the detailed requirements for placement, maintenance, and personal grooming ensures that every enlisted Soldier presents a polished, professional, and regulation-compliant image. By diligently following these guidelines and referencing Army Regulation 670-1, Soldiers can confidently wear their Class B uniform, reflecting the discipline, pride, and tradition of the United States Army. The proper setup of the Class B uniform is a tangible representation of a Soldier's commitment to excellence and the shared values of the armed forces.

Frequently Asked Questions

What are the key components of the Army's Class B uniform?

The Army Class B uniform primarily consists of a short-sleeve khaki shirt, optional long-sleeve khaki shirt, army combat uniform (ACU) trousers (or equivalent for females), black boots, and black socks. It can also include a name tape, branch tape, rank insignia, and appropriate awards/badges.

Where do you typically wear the Army Class B uniform?

The Class B uniform is generally authorized for wear in garrison settings, such as at work, during physical training (depending on unit policy), and for many formal Army events where the Class A uniform is not required. It's considered a semi-formal duty uniform.

What are the current regulations regarding the wear of the Class B uniform?

The most up-to-date guidance for the Class B uniform setup is found in Army Regulation 670-1, 'Wear and Appearance of Army Uniforms and Insignia.' Soldiers should always consult the latest version of this regulation for precise details on placement and wear.

How should rank insignia be displayed on the Class B shirt?

For the short-sleeve khaki shirt, rank insignia (e.g., chevrons for enlisted) is typically worn on the collar, centered, with the bottom edge of the insignia touching the seam where the collar attaches to the lapel. The specifics can vary slightly for different rank levels, so AR 670-1 is the definitive source.

Are there specific rules about what can be worn underneath the Class B shirt?

Yes, Soldiers are authorized to wear a plain white or tan t-shirt (depending on the uniform context and specific unit policy) underneath the khaki Class B shirt. The t-shirt should not be visible at the neckline or sleeves when the shirt is buttoned.

What accessories are commonly authorized with the Class B uniform?

Common accessories include a black belt with a silver buckle, black boots (polished or matte finish depending on type), black socks, and a service cap or beret. Name tapes and branch tapes are also standard, along with authorized badges and awards, all worn according to AR 670-1.
