Understanding Adjective and Adverb Clauses

Adjective and adverb clauses are dependent clauses that function as modifiers within sentences.

Adjective clauses describe or modify nouns and pronouns, while adverb clauses modify verbs, adjectives, or other adverbs by providing information about time, place, condition, manner, or reason. Recognizing these clauses is vital for constructing complex sentences and enhancing language precision.

Definition and Function of Adjective Clauses

An adjective clause, also called a relative clause, typically begins with relative pronouns such as who, whom, whose, which, or that. These clauses provide essential or nonessential information about the noun they modify.

Examples include:

- The book that you lent me was fascinating.
- Students who study regularly tend to perform better.

Definition and Function of Adverb Clauses

Adverb clauses begin with subordinating conjunctions such as because, although, if, when, and since. They modify verbs or adjectives by explaining the circumstance surrounding the action.

Examples include:

- She left early because she was tired.
- If it rains, the event will be postponed.
