Common Questions and Answers

The Milady Practical Workbook includes various questions designed to test comprehension and practical knowledge. Below are some frequently encountered questions from chapter 5, along with accurate answers to aid study and review.

What is the purpose of performing a patch test?

A patch test is performed to check for allergic reactions to hair color or chemical treatments before full application. It ensures client safety by identifying sensitivities that could cause adverse effects.

Why is it important to maintain proper posture during haircutting?

Proper posture prevents fatigue and injury while promoting precision and control during haircutting.

It also enhances overall efficiency and client comfort.

How often should sanitation of tools be performed in a salon setting?

Tools should be sanitized after every client use to prevent cross-contamination. This includes disinfecting combs, scissors, brushes, and any reusable implements.

1. Sanitize tools immediately after each use.
2. Use EPA-registered disinfectants.
3. Follow manufacturer's instructions for disinfectant contact time.

Terminology and Definitions

Understanding key terminology is vital for mastering the concepts in chapter 5. Below is a list of important terms and their definitions commonly encountered in this section of the workbook.

- Cuticle: The outermost layer of the hair shaft that protects the inner layers.
- Parietal Ridge: The widest area of the head, often used as a reference point in haircutting.
- Sanitation: The process of reducing germs and dirt to a safe level.
- Sectioning: Dividing hair into manageable parts for precise cutting or styling.
- Contraindication: A condition or factor that serves as a reason to withhold a certain treatment due to potential harm.
