The Declaration of Independence Preamble

The preamble of the Declaration of Independence serves as the opening statement that sets the tone for the entire document. Written primarily by Thomas Jefferson in 1776, this preamble articulates the colonies' reasons for seeking independence from British rule. It establishes the fundamental principles of equality, natural rights, and government by consent, which became cornerstones of American political philosophy.

Text and Interpretation

The famous opening lines of the Declaration's preamble state: "When in the Course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another..." This introduction emphasizes the necessity and gravity of the colonies' decision. The preamble continues by declaring that all men are created equal and endowed with unalienable rights, including life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

Purpose and Function

The preamble functions as both a justification for revolution and an expression of universal human rights. It outlines
