History and Background of the Army AGSU

The Army Green Service Uniform (AGSU) traces its roots to the iconic "pinks and greens" worn by U.S. Army officers during World War II. Officially introduced in 2020, the AGSU was designed to replace the older Army Service Uniform (ASU) blue variant as the primary service uniform for everyday duties. Its purpose is to honor the Army's heritage while providing a modern, professional look. The AGSU reflects the traditional olive drab and khaki colors reminiscent of past uniforms, symbolizing the Army's commitment to preserving its history through dress. This uniform is intended for both ceremonial and daily office wear, striking a balance between formal and functional. The introduction of the AGSU marks a significant evolution in the Army's uniform policy, emphasizing heritage, esprit de corps, and practicality.

Components of the Army AGSU Uniform

The Army AGSU uniform consists of multiple components that together create a distinct and authoritative appearance. Each piece is crafted to meet specific standards of quality and uniformity, contributing to the overall professional image of the soldier.

AGSU Coat and Trousers

The centerpiece of the AGSU is the olive green coat paired with matching trousers. The coat is tailored with a modern fit, featuring a notched lapel and four-button closure. It is constructed from a lightweight, durable wool blend suitable for year-round wear. The trousers complement the coat with a flat-front design and a sharp crease, maintaining a crisp appearance. Both items emphasize comfort and mobility while retaining a polished look.

Shirt and Neckwear

Underneath the coat, soldiers wear a tan or khaki long-sleeve shirt made from breathable fabric. The shirt includes shoulder straps (epaulettes) for rank insignia attachment. Neckwear options include an Army green necktie or neck tab for females, designed to complement the coat's color scheme. This coordination of shirt and neckwear enhances the uniform's cohesive appearance.

Footwear and Belt

Black leather dress shoes or plain-toe pumps are authorized footwear for the AGSU. The shoes must be polished to a high shine, matching the professional tone of the uniform. A black leather belt with a brass buckle embossed with the Army emblem completes the lower portion of the uniform, ensuring a neat and uniform appearance.

Headgear

The AGSU includes the black beret as the standard headgear, worn with the distinctive unit flash centered above the left eye. Alternatively, the Army service cap may be authorized for formal occasions. Headgear is an integral part of the uniform, symbolizing unit identity and tradition.

Uniform Regulations and Wear Guidelines

Strict adherence to regulations governs the wear of the Army AGSU uniform. The Army ensures that every soldier presents a consistent and disciplined image through detailed uniform standards outlined in official Army publications.

When to Wear the AGSU

The AGSU is designated as the primary service uniform for daily wear in garrison and for official functions that do not require the dress blue uniform. It is appropriate for ceremonies, office duties, and social functions, providing an intermediate level of formality. However, it is not intended for combat or field conditions.

Proper Fit and Appearance

The uniform must fit properly, with the coat sleeves ending near the wrist bone and trousers tailored to a proper break over shoes. All buttons should be fastened when standing at attention, and the uniform must be clean and pressed. Soldiers are instructed to maintain a sharp and professional appearance at all times.

Prohibited Modifications

Alterations that change the uniform's approved design, such as non-regulation colors, unauthorized patches, or decorative elements, are prohibited. Soldiers must avoid any modifications that detract from the uniform's standardized appearance.

Accessories and Insignia

Accessories and insignia on the AGSU uniform denote rank, unit affiliation, awards, and qualifications. These elements are critical for identification and recognition within the Army hierarchy.

Rank Insignia

Rank insignia are worn on the shoulder epaulettes of the coat and shirt, clearly indicating the soldier's grade and position. The insignia are made of metal or embroidered cloth, depending on the uniform component.

Unit Patches and Badges

Authorized unit patches are worn on the left sleeve of the coat, while badges such as combat or skill badges are displayed above the left breast pocket. Placement and size of these insignia follow strict regulations to preserve uniformity.

Service Ribbons and Medals

Service ribbons are worn on the left chest above the pocket, arranged in order of precedence. Medals may be worn on formal occasions, but ribbons are the standard for daily wear. All awards must be properly mounted and aligned.

- Rank insignia on shoulder epaulettes
- Unit patches on left sleeve
- Skill and combat badges above left pocket

- Service ribbons on left chest
- Authorized medals for formal events

Maintenance and Care of the AGSU

Proper maintenance of the AGSU uniform is essential to preserve its appearance and durability. The Army mandates high standards of care to ensure uniforms remain in excellent condition throughout their use.

Cleaning and Pressing

The coat and trousers require professional dry cleaning to maintain fabric integrity and color. Shirts should be laundered according to manufacturer instructions, typically machine washing with care to prevent shrinkage. Pressing the uniform components after cleaning is vital to avoid wrinkles and maintain sharp creases.

Storage

Uniforms should be stored on quality hangers in a cool, dry place to prevent damage from moisture or pests. The coat and trousers must be hung separately to maintain shape. Shirts should be buttoned and hung or folded neatly to reduce wrinkles.

Inspection and Repairs

Regular inspections for wear, loose buttons, or damaged insignia are required. Prompt repairs must be conducted to comply with appearance standards. Soldiers are responsible for ensuring their uniforms remain serviceable and presentable at all times.

Grooming Standards and Appearance

The Army AGSU uniform is complemented by strict grooming standards that promote a uniform and professional appearance among soldiers. These standards cover hair, facial hair, and overall presentation to ensure the uniform's integrity is upheld.

Hair and Facial Hair

Hair must be neatly trimmed and styled in accordance with Army regulations. For men, hair length and bulk are regulated to fit under headgear properly. Facial hair is generally prohibited except for mustaches, which must be neatly trimmed and conform to size limitations.

Jewelry and Personal Items

Jewelry must be conservative and not interfere with uniform appearance or safety. Authorized items include a wristwatch, wedding band, and small earrings for females. No visible tattoos or body art that detracts from professionalism are permitted while in uniform.

Overall Presentation

Soldiers are expected to maintain a clean, polished, and disciplined look while wearing the AGSU. This includes polished footwear, properly worn insignia, and a well-maintained uniform. Attention to detail reflects the Army's values of pride and professionalism.
